Responding to a public figure's incredibly stupid comments on a public forum is not "abuse"

I know you regressive leftist idiots love your safe spaces but this is called "debate" you know like in a free society?

If you spout bullshit expect to be challenged on it

The claim that right-wingers represent a bigger violent threat than Islamic terrorists is provably complete crap

Her stupidity got called out and now you all help her play the victim because a few trolls left mean comments

Judging from much of the media discussion you'd be forgiven for thinking the worst thing about the Manchester bombing, about the obliteration of 22 young pop fans just four weeks ago, is that it gave rise to some mean comments about Muslims on Twitter. Why does everything become about Islamophobia? It's such a surreal, narcissistic and actually quite inhumane obsession. "Oh shit, 22 people have been massacred, this means people are gonna be rude to Muslims, what a drag." It sometimes feels as though 21st-century Britain has lost all sense of moral proportion.

Our goal in sitting down with him was to shine a light - as journalists are supposed to do - on this influential figure, and yes - to discuss the considerable falsehoods he has promoted with near impunity.

"The cold biological truth is that sex changes are impossible."

It is certainly ironic how liberals who posture as defenders of science when it comes to global warming a sentimenta myth unsupported by evidence: flee a reference to biology when t comes to gender Biology has been programmatically excluded from women's studies and gender studies programs for a most 50 years now. Thus very few current gender studies professors and theorists, here and abroad, are intellectually or scientifica ly prepared to teach their subjects.

The cold biological truth is that sex changes are impossible. Every single cell of the human body rema ns coded with one's birth gender for fe Intersex ambiguities can occur, but they are developmenta anomalies that represent a tiny proportion of all human births.

Smoking is healthier than social justice.

Men's testosterone levels declined in last 20 years

By Anne Harding NEW YORK

(Reuters Health) A new study has found a "substantia," drop in U.S. men's testosterone levels since the 1980s, but the reasons for the decline remain unclear. This trend also does not appear to be related to age.

The average levels of the male hormone dropped by 1 percent a year, Dr. Thomas Travison and colleagues from the New England Research Institutes, in Watertown, Massachusetts, found. This means that, for example, a 65-year-old man in 2002 would have testosterone levels 15 percent lower than those of a 65-year-old in 1987. This also means that a greater proportion of men in 2002 would have had below-normal testosterone levels than in 1987.

"The entire population is shifting somewhat downward we think," Travison told Reuters Health. "We're counting on other studies to confirm this."

Travison and his team analyzed data from the Massachusetts Male Aging Study, a long-term investigation of aging in about 1,700 Boston-area men. Data from the men were collected for three time intervals: 1987-1989, 1995-1997, and 2002-2004.

While a man's testosterone level will fall steadily as he ages, the researchers observed a speedier decline in average testosterone levels than would have been expected with aging alone.

They hypothesized that the rising prevalence of obesity as well as the sharp decline in cigarette smoking might help explain their findings, given that testosterone levels are lower among overweight people and smoking increases testosterone levels. But these factors accounted for only a small percentage of the observed difference.

This isn't even a skit anymore. It's literally true on every score.

twitter.com/TheSwogBlog/st ...

> and founder of the site Fansided —has set his phone is set to notify him the second the President hits "send"; since it's his only Twitter notification, he rarely misses it.
> "There've been times I've been in bed and I'll hear the alert and roll out of bed and start firing back," Best told BuzzFeed News. Sometimes he'll mock up a series of tweets on a subject in advance — say, the congressional investigation into the Trump administration's ties to Russia — so he can copy them into an instant tweetstorm. For Best, a self-identified member of the anti-Trump #resistance, it's a form of catharsis and a chance to "fight back" during what he calls a "particularly depressing time" in politics.

"They cucked out Breitbart cucked out"

"They are leaving the island"

Right-wing internet personalities who command a sizable following pounced on the move, suggesting it signaled the beginning of the end for the website that helped usher Donald Trump into the White House.

"They cucked out," right-wing internet personality Mike Cernovich said in a Wednesday YouTube video, employing a slur frequently used by individuals on the far-right to suggest the website had gone soft. "Breitbart cucked out by firing Katie McHugh. There's no other way to describe it."

Lucian Wintrich, the White House correspondent for the right-wing Gateway Pundit website, said Breitbart was on its way out of the space occupied by other pro-Trump news organizations.

"They are leaving the island occupied by the Gateway Pundit and Drudge Report and a few other news sources," Wintrich told CNN.

20 73 117

Oliver Darcy @o verdarcy 7 Jun 2017

Breitbart "like a rock band that once they become cool sells out and does commercials"

John Ziegler, a former conservative radio talk show host and columnist for Mediaite, told CNN the anger coming from those who were Breitbart's most passionate supporters reflected "a textbook case of what happens when an anti-establishment institution becomes part of the establishment."

"Inherently there are going to be people who think they sold out," he said. "They are kind of like a rock band that once they became cool sells out and does commercials. The alt-right doesn't do well as being part of the establishment. They want to be anti-establishment, but now Breitbart is the establishment."

6 19 64

Oliver Darcy @o verdarcy 7 Jun 2017

Breitbart still has defenders. [illegible] to me attacks from "New Right" may stem from "professional jealousy"

Despite all the criticism, however, Breitbart still has passionate defenders.

Paul Joseph Watson, a personality for InfoWars, the right-wing outlet known for peddling conspiracy theories, told CNN Breitbart is still a "powerhouse with many fantastic writers."

"Generally speaking, most would jump at the chance to work for Breitbart, so the 'new right' throwing them under a bus is a massive overreaction," he said. "Some of it may be based in professional jealousy."

"The left is eager to sow division within the right," Watson added, "and we shouldn't be helping them do that."

These new YouTube guidelines are so vague, anything mildly offensive will be automatically de-monetized.

> The new guidelines attempt to clarify what content is eligible for advertising. These guidelines cover "hateful content," which includes content that promoting discrimination or disparaging people and individuals based on any "characteristic associated with systematic discrimination or marginalization."
> Content that inappropriately uses family entertainment characters, such as depicting these characters engaged in "violent, sexual, vile, or otherwise inappropriate behavior", even if done so for comedy or satire, is prohibited.

> "Incendiary and demeaning" content that uses "gratuitously disrespectful language" is also included in the guidelines.

Secret Service Investigates Potential Threat

(WASHINGTON)–Early this morning, Special Agents from the Secret Service Washington Field Office and officers from the Metropolitan Police Department investigated a report of a potential threat against Secret Service protectees. The Secret Service received information from a concerned citizen and Trump International Hotel Security staff. An individual was subsequently located at the Trump International Hotel in Washington, D.C. Agents and officers recovered a semi-automatic assault style rifle and a handgun in the individual's vehicle. Bryan Moles of Pennsylvania was arrested by MPD officers for illegal possession of the firearms.

At no time were any Secret Service protectees at risk. "The Secret Service greatly appreciates its strong partnership with the Metropolitan Police Department, the Pennsylvania State Police, and all of our law enforcement partners. This investigation is still new and ongoing," said Special Agent in Charge Brian Ebert, Secret Service Washington Field Office.

Between 1995-2011, immigration cost the UK at least £114 billion (welfare payments & services vs taxes).

After some criticism for its methodology, manner of spinning and burial of crucial data, the following year UCL published its completed findings. By that point, and taking into account only UCL's own figures, the results were even starker. For the full report showed that the earlier figure of £95 billion far understated the cost of immigration to Britain. In fact, immigrants over that 1995 -2011 period had cost the United Kingdom a figure more like £114 billion, with the final figure potentially rising to as high as £159 billion. Needless to say, the discovery that immigration had actually cost the UK more than a hundred billion pounds did not make the news and nobody was made aware on their news bulletins of a headline that should have read, 'Recent immigrants to the UK cost British taxpayers more than £100 billion' How could they have done when the crucial findings didn't even make it into the conclusions of the publication that had discovered them?'

Good. We need more of this.

Mohamed Fadil spokesman for the Libyan community in Manchester, said they were shocked by Monday's attack but admitted there was a problem in their midst that needed to be dealt with.

"The community here it's all working people like doctors and researchers just normal people" he told AFP.

"The Libyan community is not an environment for extremism" he insisted.

Fadil said the community met in the aftermath of the suicide attack to address the issue.

"The general consensus is there is a problem. Maybe we're not reaching out enough to our young people" he said.

"You'll see very active steps from the community in the very near future more activities and more involvement."

"Radicalised by mosques in south Manchester."

Why are these mosques allowed to radicalize terrorists?

> A friend of the Abedi family told The Times that he had been "radicalised by mosques in south Manchester, there are many people who are suspicious about him" The friend added "Many Libyan youths started to become radicalised after 2011. His parents were anti-Gaddafi and fled as they are very very religious."

Melania thinks Spicer not doing a good enough job defending Trump.

> In recent weeks her concerns have centered on White House press secretary Sean Spicer whose role as an on-camera briefer is expected to change after Trump returns from his overseas trip.
> "She was really concerned that Spicer was not doing a good job, that they were not proactive in defending the president," said one outside adviser who speaks to the president regularly. "The leaks bother her. She believes a lot of people are more interested in serving themselves than him."

Why migration from Africa this century will make the refugee crisis look like a dress rehearsal. te egraph co .k/news/2017/05/2

> Today, that means the biggest drivers of migration are likely to be the lower cost of transportation and the demographics in Africa (where populations are increasing at an extraordinary rate) and in parts of the developed world (where populations are declining). Take the contrasting experiences of Nigeria and Italy. In 1950, Nigeria's population was around 38 million, Italy's 47 million. In 2015, Nigeria's stood at 182 million, with Italy's at 60 million. According to UN projections, Nigeria's population will rise to over 700 million by 2100 thanks in part to declining infant mortality, while Italy's will drop back to 50 million thanks to a persistently low birth rate
> For much of this period, Nigeria's population will, on average, be rather young. And young people, unencumbered by family commitments, have a habit of spreading their wings – particularly if, as in Nigeria's case, per capita incomes are less than a tenth of those in, say, Italy (or, indeed, the UK).

You left out two critical words. And didn't provide the URL so that people could read the full article.

> In January, the Trump White House initially denied any contacts with Russian officials during the 2016 campaign. The White House and advisers to the campaign have since confirmed four meetings between Kislyak and Trump advisers during that time.
> The people who described the contacts to Reuters said they had seen no evidence of wrongdoing or collusion between the campaign and Russia in the communications reviewed so far. But the disclosure could increase the pressure on Trump and his aides to provide the FBI and Congress with a full account of interactions with Russian officials and others with links to the Kremlin during and immediately after the 2016 election.
